Biography

Luke's interest in photography and visual arts came about from studying photography at 'O' and 'A' level. This led to securing a place at the much-coveted London College of printing to further his photographic education. Whilst studying he also found time to get photographic commissions for the likes of The Face and Harpers Bizarre, as well as assisting David Bailey and Nick Knight in fashion and portrait photography.

After leaving college he found his personal work using series of photographic stills to express his ideas, crossing over more and more with film making, culminating in winning 1st prize at the South Bank Photo Show for a series of 4 prints.

This led onto work experience and a close working relationship with Tony Kaye quickly becoming the in house loader and pa. He then went the traditional route choosing to learn all the intricacies of film making through the loading, focusing and shooting route, which he found an invaluable experience.

As his lighting work began to supersede his focusing work and already with 40+ commercials, 5 short films and many promos to his name it was time to go lighting hanging up his tape measure for the opportunity to light his first feature film 'Dog – The Movie' in November 2002.
